The nation was tense but relatively calm. The big push "to be free or to perish"-as Castro put it in his declaration of war against the strongman President - may not come until after Easter holidays end Monday morning.

Some rebel sources in Havana claim the Catholic Church has been friendly to the 31-year-old rebel leader's cause and he would not want to antagonize the Catholic heirarchy by open attacks during religious celebrations.

There was also no sign of Castro's long-threatened call for ageneral strike. Rumors in Havana said the bearded insurgent leader would issue the call from his mountain hideout on Tuesday. Castro claims 50,000 supporters would then pour into the streets, halt all commerce and do battle wih the police and the army. Vows Against Strike

But the government, with the backing of the powerful Cuban Confederation of Labor, has vowed there will be no strike. Workers have been authorized to kill anyone who urges them to walk off their jobs. Those who strike will lose their jobs permanently. Employers have been

Worshipers to Fill Churches on Easter

Easter, a day of triumph and hope for the Christian world, will be observed in many services in Salem churches on Sunday.

Thousands of persons are expected to attend morning worship in the various churches as ministers proclaim a Risen Christ . . . "And the Angel said unto them, 'Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: He is risen; He is not here: behold the place where they laid Him.'

Special services have been scheduled in all local and district churches Easter Sunday, beginning with sunrise services in some of the churches. Several young peoples groups of the city will hold a joint sunrise worship at the Country Club at 6 a.m. where James Cope, pastor of the Damascus Methodist Church, will speak.

A number of the churches have arranged for two morning services tomorrow. The First Presbyterian will have three services. Choirs in all of the churches have prepared special Easter music.

EASTER MEANS

Why all this excitement about Easter? Why special sunrise services? Why crowded churches, eloquent sermons, and joyful anthems?

Easter itself tells us why. Easter tells us, first of all,

Easter itself tells us why. Easter tells us, first of all, that Christ is God. His resurrection, as He had promised, is proof of that. "He was declared to be the Son of God... by the resurrection from the dead," the Bible says Easter also tells us that Christ was successful in doing what He had come to do and what we are unable to do. When on Good Friday Christ said, "It is finished" He had kept all of God's laws, He had paid the price of sin. But was all this enough? Was the Father satisfied with what Christ had done?

Christ's empty tomb shouts: "Yes." God's justice had been satisfied, the ransom had been accepted. Christ's resurrection assures the sinner that his debt to God has been paid in full. The empty tomb is our Easter tells us, furthermore, that if we accept Christ as our Savior, we, too, shall live forever. "Because I live, ye shall live also," Christ assures all those who believe in Him. "I am the Resurrection and the Life. He that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. And whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die." This is what Easter means.

On This Newest Easter Day

The hope that Christendom has kept in vuman focus for nearly 2,000 years is strengthened annually by the Easter festival. But even before Christendom's beginnings, there was an Easter festival. This is nature's season of hope in the earth's northern hemisphere - a time of brighter tomorrows. On this newest Easter day, the same resurgence of faith that always has made the past seem less important than the future is strengthening human confidence again. Once more, assurance of things that faith can make possible is greater than doubt of all the things that have not confirmed faith in

The fault is seen again to be of man's own making, not in his opportunity to make human existence on earth as exalted as the great plan of life that unfolds each springtime. Man fails only when he is wrong-headed about himself as part of the great plan. Whenever he understands how his small affairs can fit the plan, if he will let them be in harmony with it, instead of striving to bring them into conflict with it, he succeeds.

This has ben the great contribution of Christendom - that it revealed by precept what otherwise would have remained hidden. It has shed its blessing alike on Christian and pagan and on those who never reached any clear beliefs.

It has made a pattern for society and a structure for government that has widened opportunity for all. It has become a bastion of defense against all who would make men the tools by which other men would fashion human affairs to suit themselves, with no thought of the greater plan that would make all men pleasing in the sight of their Creator. These are not new thoughts on this newest

They are the thoughts that have passed through men's minds each season when the earth again was filled with bright promises of tomorrows that would be better than sad They are the thoughts that have built whatever has been attained so far in civilization and that must underlie all further attain-

They are the essence and substance of human dignity.

Whiteleather's Demonstration Farm

It can be assumed that all parties concerned in the demonstration that took place a the Whiteleather farm near Minerva on Tuesday understood what they were doing. That would apply to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation representatives as much as it would apply to Dr. P. A. Whiteleather and his friends who were on hand to back up the farm's owner when he refused to let the ASC representatives determine how many acres were planted in wheat.

They were testing a policy of agricultural control that must be kept going with a whip when it cannot be kept going with a lollipop.

They were specifically testing whether or not when the lollipop has failed, the whip can be used without repercussions that would blow agricultural control into smithernees.

What has been proved so far is that some farm owners are in amood to quit sucking the lollipop and to challenge the government to use the whip, in the firm belief that this would set off a grass-roots rebellion against government regulation of farming.

The farm owners who are in this mood have confronted the regulators with a dilemma. They cannot regulate agriculture without the threat of punishment, and they cannot make the threat of punishment materialize without risking the withdrawal of their authority to control agriculture.

Obviously, they are counting on public opinion to strengthen their hand in the Whiteleather case. But is so happens in the Whiteleaher case that they are confronted with an antagonist who knows a good bit about swaying public opinion, himself-and so far he has been doing all the swaying.

Up There and Down Here

When the International Geophysical Year ends next December - 18 months after it started last July 1 - no one will know what happened, except the scientists who believed in the project and worked at it.

There are about 10,000 of them, making observations at some 2,000 places and pooling their information for future reference. It is happenstance that one of the smallest items in their program, the earth satellite detail, has become of major interest. It was not intended to be that way, because only the United States and the Soviet Union were interested in the satellite detail. Whether their interest grows more from politics than from science is a moot quesion. The IGY scienists as a whole are seeking information about the earth, itself, not the space surrounding the earth. The project began in an evening of conversation eight years ago, on April 5, 1950. A small group of scientists were the guests of James Alfred Van Allen, head of the physics department at Iowa State University. They agreed to push for a worldwide study of the earth and its environment, with international pooling of information. It was to be the first time in history that a world community of scientists was formed to collect and exchange information. Sixty-seven countries are represented.

THE CIRCUS is in New York and it gives Madison Square Garden a "face lifting." The tense, sophisticated, even hard faces which mark the sports events fade out as the mood of childhood takes over. Great as the show in Gotham is, a boy who has never known the circus of the open lot in the smaller cities has lost much. The exciting week before the big show's arrival, the predawn trip to the railroad yards to see the circus trains unload and the rush to the circus lot to see tents go up remain unforgetable.

What was a greater boyhood thrill than leading a pony in the big parade in return for a free ticket? All this is partly lost to America today, since "the Big Show" no longer plays the lots and appears only in auditoriums or ball parks. The circus bill poster no longer blazes from thousands of barns, sheds, fences and store windows all over the land. Even the gay poster of the lions, tigers and bareback riders whichlingered for months after the circus had departed used to stir a kid's heart. The circus, roaming the country and filling the sticks with joy, must have been a factor for great good, for there was little juvenile

The Old Easter Customs

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON From Maundy pence to Tuttimen's kisses, Easter in England means a string of ancient customs which have little if anything to do with Easter itself.

The origins of the Britannia Coconut Dancers, the Hallaton Hare Pie Scramble or the Kissing Tuttimen of Hungerford have been lost through the centuries. Nobody quite knows why they are connected with Easter.

Yet the time of their observance day and somewhere in the mists of time there must have been a religious meaning to each of them.

Egg rolling, of course, has adopted an Easter meaning. The widespread Easter custom, limited in England to the northern counties, has come to symbolize the roling away of the stone from the sepulchre-although in pre-Christian times it was a fertility

But why the Britannia Coconut Dancers should dance only on Easter eve is another matter. Yet for more than a century, this team of seven blackfaced dancers (nicknamed Nutters for no known reason) has danced traditional English country dances along the seven miles between the villages of Waterfoot and Whitworth.

It would also be difficult to connect Easter's religious story with the hare pie scramble at Hallaton. In this ancient, rowdy ceremony, two huge rabbit pies are baked and torn to pieces among the town's children, who "scramble" for the chunks.

On the second Tuesday after Easter, two village officials known as "Tuttimen" carry long. flower-decked poles through the village streets. By ancient right, they are allowed to kiss every girl or woman they meet. Women who refuse a kiss are fined one penny-but Tuttimen collect far more kisses than pennies. The custom has been observed every Easter since the early 1300's. But how one gets to be a Tuttiman is a closely guarded secret.

Britain's best known Easter charity is not only a religious occasion but a royal one. The distribution of the Royal Maundy at Westminster Abbey by the reigning sovereign takes place on Holy or Maundy Thursday.

THIS IS ONE of the oldest alms-giving customs in the world and nearly every king or queen of England has taken part in it. The present Queen Elizabeth's first public engagement as queen was the Maundy ceremony of 1952.

Originally, the ceremony com-memorated Christ washing the feet of his disciples before the Last Supper. Until James II, the king or queen actually did wash the feet of the charity's recipients as a symbol of humility.

One record of the first Queen Elizabeth notes that the ceremony, which began before noon and proceeded through more than 80 pairs of feet, lasted until well after sundown.

The Maundy is given to as many poor and aged people of each sex as there are years in the sovereign's age. This year's gifts of standard currency replacing the clothing and food once distributed was given to 32 men and 32

In addition, they get the famed Maundy Pence-tiny silver coins with a face value of less than 5 cents which can't be spent at all, and are yet extremely valuable.

Maundy Pence were first minted in the 8th century; they gave the name "sterling" to English currency. They are not legal tender, being spent only by the monarch, only on this occasion. They are specially minted for the Maundy ceremony in denominations of one to four pence.

Each Maundy recipient is given as many pence as the queen is years old-32 pence per person theis year. Bidding by coin collectors for the rare coins has made these symbolic pence a really valuable gift for those chosen to receive England's most famous Easter charity from the hand of

Pentagon Snafu

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Ike Reveals Clumsiness of Command Structure

The American people have never been told until now what a dangerous situation exists in the Pentagon in the event of the sudden oubreak of a world war. It is an open question whether the recommendations just m a d e will remedy the situation. Pre sident

E is e nhower. in his latest David Lawrence message to Congress, wisely reveals the cumbersome, unwieldly command structure which has been in existence ever since the first so-called "unification" law was passed by Congress a decade ago. Mr. Eisenhower describes it as follows: "Today the channel of military command and direction runs from the commander-in-chief to the secretary of defense, then to the secretary of an executive agent department, then to a chief of service and then, finally, to the unified commander. "In time of emergency, the secretary of the executive agent department delegates to his service chief his authority over the strategic direcion and conduct of combat operations. Thus, ultimately the chief of an individual service issues, in the name of the secretary of defense, orders to a unified commander."

This means that, unlike the manner in which World War I and World War II were fought under the direct orders of the president, the Defense Department now has been sandwiched, in the form of a huge bureaucratic organization. between the military commanders and the commander-in-chief.

IN WORLD WAR I and World War II, there was no such layer of authority between the service chiefs of staff and the president. In World War II both President Franklin D. Roosevelt and President Truman had at their elbows the three heads of the armed services. The head of the Army Air Corps - not then a separate service - functioned alongside the chiefs of the other two services. Instead of a chairman, Admiral Leahy acted virtually as of the joint chiefs and liaison man with the president.

No civilian secretaries were ablt to interfere with combat operations. Unified field commanders. irrespective of what services they happened to be in, reported directly to the joint chiefs. Now everything is concentrated in the three civilian secretaries and in the secretary of defense. Mr. Eisenhower's plan would remove the three civilian secretaries from the chain of command but would increase the authority of the secrctary of defense, making him, in effect, a deputy commander-in-

This is a mistaken approach. No civilian understands military operations well enough to be given such a responsibility. What is needed is the establishment of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as a part of the executive staff of the White House. As long as the Constitution makes the president also the commander-in-chief of all the armed services, this authority cannot be constitutionally delegated.

One of the proposed changesto relieve the joint chiefs of administrative or command responsibilities in their respective services - is a step in the right direction. But, under the new setup, the joint chiefs become powerless and merely an adjunct of the office of the secretary of defense.

THEY MUST GO through an extra person before reaching the president of the United States. The clumsiness of the present arrange. ment which Mr. Eisenhower emsizes was just as noticeable five years ago when this correspondent pointed out in these dispatches the very same defects, only to find himself in the minority as the Congress enacted the laws that brought about the existing snafu.

The battle inside and outside the Pentagon has much to do with who shall control the money. This is what stimulates interservice rivalries. It will not be eliminated by the new plan.

The only thing that will do away with such friction is to give all services, through their chiefs, a chance to sit alongside the commander-in-chief and be guided by his decisions.

The secretary of defense should be the head man on procurement and research and on the coordination of peacetime activities but no civilian other than the president of the United States should command the military services.

Congress may debate many points of the new plan for a long time but one thing seems imperative - to get rid as quickly as possible of the present chain-ofcommand, functioning as it does through a maze of civilian secretaries in each armed service and through many assistant secretaries of defense. Every week's delay in enacting a revised plan could mean a frightful debacle if war suddenly broke out.

Futile Compromise

Ways and Means Committee on the President's proposal to provide federal money for workers who exhausted their unemploymnt bnefits, Secretary Mitchell found himself caught between two fires.

His ordeal suggests the futility of the administration's effort to compromise with 'liberal' policies in federal aid.

This has already been shown, over and over, in the labor union field. No matter what the administration is willing to concede, "liberal" Democrats will outbid it and union politicians will oppose all and sundry Republican candidates.

The proposal, in brief, would provide a special federal handout to a small proportion of the unemployed, with dubious prospect of recovery of the "loan" from states and employers some time in the future.

It is hard to see the application of this measure, either as a means of fighting the recession or as a mans of aiding the really needy. For the sums thus distributed would affect the general economy only in an infinitesmal degree and thousands of unmployed who might need help could not qualify under the terms of such a measure.

OF COURSE, Secretary Mitchell protested that the plan would be only temporary. But there is the indisputable fact that once the federal government takes over a responsibility now borne by the states, it never scapes. It only gets in deeper and deeper.

"Liberal" Democrats led by Congressman McCarthy, who himself has a bill going much farther toward federalizing unemployment benefits than the administration's, scolded the secretary for not coming out frankly for federal regulation of the whole system by setting standards.

McCarthy argued, in effect, that all "important" social legislation in the past had been passed in time of national distress. Therefore, why not use the recession as an excuse to talk over unemployment compensation?

In rply to questioning by another member of the committee. Mitchell admitted that under the present law the so-called Reed Fund could be drawn upon by the states which were unable to extend their payments. Thus we have, at least by implication, an admission that when the states believe they do not need something it is necessary for Uncle Sam to enter the states and do the job

A CONGRESSMAN from Vir ginia protested that the plan woul

In the hearings before the House make it possible for the federal government-in case astat re fusd the job of distributing the funds as its agent-to distribute funds in the unwilling state arel establish an obligation despite the state's protest.

Representatives from other states pointed out that they needed no such help.

Several indicated a widespread conviction that, once the federal government established this plan, it would mean the beginning of the end of state reponsibility for the unemployed. To Mitchell's response that the plan was only a 'temporary' one, many instances were cited to show that past plans labeled "temporary" proved to be

One witness at the hearings commented that apparently Mitchell ended his testimony with only one friend on the committee. That was Chairman Daniel Reed who, since he had introduced the administration's bill, remained discreetly silent.

And so the old truth was underlined: When a person compromises with principle, he loses the support of both sides and principle

ONE DAY in North Carolina the battery's position was overrun and the young captain and his men fled across a nearby bridge, setting fire to it so that they could not be followed. They were safely across when Johnny Ring realized that the captain's sword had been left behind. He didn't wait to ask permission; he went back for it. Somehow, he got back to the campsite, found the sword and returned to the bridge, now blazing furiously. Plunging through the falmes, the sword held high, he crossed to emerge in flames and collapse at Conwell's feet. He lingered for a day or two, then he

Not long after, Conwell himself was wounded and lay all night on the battlefield. In his agony he kept seeing the flaming body of his faithful friend, Johnny Ring, holding his sword. He vowed then, that if he survived, he would live not only his own life but the life of Johnny Ring as well.

RUSSELL H. CONWELL did survive. He went back to New England to become a lawyer, a lecturer, an editor, a correspondent, but none of these seemed to satisfy him - or to satisfy Johnny Ring. Finally, at 36, he decided to enter the ministry and was ordained. Here he found that he could live his own life to the fullest - and live to the fullest and live the life of Johnny Ring

For Conwell became not only one of the most renowned ministers of his time, he became one of the world's most famous lecturers. His lecture "Acres of Diamonds" remain a great inspirational classic.

Itwas given probably more times and in more places than nearly any lecture in American History. It earned more than $4,000,00 and he used this money to found Temple University in Philadelphia and finance the college careers of hundredsof young men.

He justified his own life - and the life of Johnny Ring. It can truly be said that Johnny Ring did not die on that long-ago battlefield, but lives today in the continuing influence of Dr. Conwell's great ministry and the University he founded.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL ... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

BEWARE OF THIS DOG

Bullitt leaps through a window to grab a trainer posing as a vandal in school.

A NY VANDALS lurking around on Long Island are hereby warned—stay away from the Great Neck school district. Bullitt, a three-year-old German shepherd, is guarding property in the schools there. The 65-pound female was selected from among 100 other dogs because of her aptitude for her assignment, which includes holding intruders at bay and barking when a fire starts or a water main breaks. Bullitt is one of the star pupils from the Canine college in West Redding. Conn. Officials throughout New York hope dogs can also help curb delinquents.

When not working, Bullitt is a fond pet of children. She's with Melanie Miller.
